Royal Institute of Painters in Water Colours

Watercolour is a very English art form; and the R.I. was founded in 1831 when the Royal Academy refused to accept watercolours as a serious artistic expression, despite its use by such eminent painters as Turner, Cotman, de Wint and many others.

The RI, was able to add the prefix 'Royal' to its title by command of Queen Victoria in 1885.

Today the Institute has joined other leading Art Societies in the Federation of British Artists based at the Mall Galleries in London.

The Russell Gallery is very pleased to welcome 35 of the RI members who are exhibiting their work in acrylic, gouache, mixed media and watercolour for this varied and interesting show.
